The Anti-Slavery Bugle.

From the Watchman and Reflector. GRECIAN AND ROMAN SLAVERY.

The population of that part of Ancient Greece, called Attica, is reckoned at 500,000. Of that, about 365,000 were slaves, including women and children, thus making the proportion of the slave to the free people nearly as four to one. These slaves were not generally negroes, or blacks, but were as white as the Athenians themselves. Multitudes of them were Greeks, and these not unfrequently of the more cultivated classes.
